

A GOOD VARIETY SHOW.

The Bon Ton Vaudevilles Open the Week
at Front Street.

The Bon Ton Vaudevilles opened a week's engagement at the Front Street Opera House Monday afternoon before a smaller audience than the show deserved. The company contains some of the best variety artists who have appeared at the house this season, and they give a show that pleased those who were present. The olio includes the acts of McGuire and Thornton, in which some great feats of swordsmanship are given by Mr. McGuire, who defeated Duncan Ross at New York; J. W. Harrington, a clever mimic; Crowley and Foley, Irish comedians, who can dance easily and gracefully; the Allcoates, in a comedy sketch, with some new jokes; Clark and Temple, in a singing sketch, in which the fine voice of Mr. Clark caught the audience; and Gus Mills, a negro female impersonator, whose act is one of the best things on the program. The show closes with a farce, called, "The $10,000 Beauty."
