COMING TO INGERSOLL, PART II

by Jan D.

I remember the drive downtown to my first meeting. Even though it was the middle of winter and the darkness provided a protective cloak, I was still afraid to venture out of the house as Jan. This, of course, created another fear. Would I walk into a meeting where everyone was dressed to the 'nines'? Would I end up being the odd 'man' out once again? I parked my car outside the building and deliberated my next move. It wasn't too late. I could fire up the engine and head back home. Nobody would be the wiser. But I realized that there was nothing to head back to. After 45 years, it was time to go forward, not backward. Just then I spotted someone walking up the ramp to the front door. Even in the darkness I could see that this person was not wearing a dress. Maybe I wouldn't be the only one wearing pants. For some reason, that was all I needed to get moving. There were two women talking together just outside the door and they greeted me warmly as I entered. Maybe this wouldn't be so bad, I thought. I entered the small meeting room, quickly found an empty chair and sat down. I made an elaborate show of taking off my jacket and settling in, all the while taking quick peeks at the other people around me. I don't know what I had expected, but what I saw was a group of normal-looking people...not a talk show contender in the bunch. As we waited for the meeting to start, I felt myself begin to relax. The room was decorated in warm, inviting tones. There was the smell of fresh coffee brewing. These things conspired to bring my emotions under control.

The meeting began and we were asked to introduce ourselves. I said my name was Jan and I realized that this was the first time I had ever made this pronouncement to a group of people. After the introductions, we went around the room again and each person told a little bit about what their week had been like. I was a little uncomfortable, so when it was my turn I mumbled a few sentences about how glad I was to be there and that seemed to suffice since nobody pumped me for any more information. As I listened to each person share, I heard bits and pieces of the same struggles I was facing: job problems; family concerns; money challenges. Some stories were sad and others were happy and uplifting. In general, these were the same type of topics that would be discussed in any group that brought together a cross-section of individuals. As their stories unfolded I began to look at this group in a different way. These people became real to me and I knew for the first time, deep inside, that I was not alone.

Life is not meant to be a solitary journey. It's true that we are all unique, but there is a commonality that binds us to each other. Shared experiences forge the chain and sharing of these experiences with others strengthens the links. No one has to face the challenges of life all by themselves. By reaching out to others we can shatter the barrier that separates us from the rest of the world. And, in the end, we will find that the spectre of aloneness is an illusion that evaporates in the light of togetherness.

Sorry, Lily.

AT THE END OF THE RAINBOW.....

A bit of St. Patrick's Day Trivia

Why did the Irish believe there was gold at the end of rainbows? The truth is, they didn't. It was all a big misunderstanding.

Rainbows are formed when light hits droplets of rain. Each droplet acts like a prism, splitting the light into different colors, each of which is bent at a slightly different angle. That's what forms a rainbow. Because the light source, the sun, is a circle and because light travels in a straight line, the rainbow is a circle as well.

In order for the sun's rays to refract so we can see them, the sun has to be within 42 degrees of the horizon, either rising or setting. That's relatively low, which means we can never see the full circle of a rainbow, just the top of the arc.

As far back as the 17th century, the Irish understood this. And they were fond of saying that one was as likely to find a pot of gold as to find the end of a rainbow. The expression somehow changed and became part of their fairy mythology.

THE WORDS "GENDER" AND "SEX"

Modern English language custom and usage in many instances now distinguishes clearly between the terms "gender" and "sex".

SEX

refers to biology
male and female
(and each also has neuter and mixed categories)
in matters relating to biology
hormones
genitalia
and reproduction

speak of:

male sex
or female sex
as descriptive adjectives

Sex in this sense has been an unchanging element over the aeons of biological time; the egg and the sperm have very rigidly-prescribed characteristics and functions in biology.

We are taught to exhibit the roles customary to the birth sex at the time, but a person of the female sex can certainly appear socially as having a masculine gender (i.e. transgendered/transsexual), and vice versa

Regular use of this linguistic distinction will help to clarify many debates over societal distinctions.

GENDER

refers to societal roles
masculine and feminine
in matters relating to
societal roles
dress customs and social behavior

speak of:

masculine gender
feminine gender
as descriptive adjectives

As an invention of humans, gender has been historically variable in different places and times and is constantly in flux.

Robert Ingersoll:

A Voice in the Wilderness, Then and Now

Reprinted from the April, 1993 issue of the Alliance.

Listed below are some quotes by Robert Green Ingersoll, the advocate for the forces of justice and prosecutor of the status quo, who lived in the 19th century. Like Ingersoll Center which bears his name, Ingersoll brought a strong voice and hope to those who suffered the injustices of an intolerant world. Although he died in 1899, at the age of 66, his words have been renewed over and over again in this century, and especially now as we face the hatred and bigotry prevalent in our society. Ingersoll said:

"The moment a prejudice is known to be a prejudice, it disappears. Ignorance is the soil in which prejudice must grow. Touched by a ray of light, it dies."

He also said:

"I have a dream...that the withered hand of want will not always be stretched out for charity; that finally wisdom will sit in the legislatures, justice in the courts, charity will occupy all the pulpits, and that finally the world will be governed by justice and charity and by the splendid light of liberty."

In 1882, Ingersoll, in a speech on Decoration Day preceded John F. Kennedy's exhortation at his inaugural by declaring:

"More politicians wish the country to do something for them. True patriots desire to something for their country."

Finally, Ingersoll stated in his "Creed":

Justice is the only worship.

Love is the only priest.

Ignorance is the only slavery.

Happiness is the only good.

The time to be happy is now,

The place to be happy is here,

The way to be happy is to make others so.

HEY GOOD COOKIN'

CORNMEAL CHICKEN MUFFINWICHES

This handy sandwich in a muffin can be made in advance and stored in an airtight plastic bag in the freezer for up to two months. Simply pop a frozen muffinwich into a lunch bag in the morning, and it will be thawed by noon.

Preparation time: 10 minutes Cooking time: 15 to 20 minutes

INGREDIENTS

- 8 1/2-ounce package corn muffin mix
- Egg substitute equivalent to 1 egg or two egg whites
- 2 cups (8 oz) coarsely chopped cooked chick (cooked without skin)
- 4 green onion, sliced
- 1/4 teaspoon dried sage
- Vegetable oil spray

INSTRUCTIONS

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F.

Prepare corn muffin mix according to package directions, but use egg substitute or egg whites for the egg and skim milk for the milk. Fold chicken, green onions, and sage into the batter.

Spray 6 muffin cups with vegetable oil or line with paper bake cups. Spoon batter into cups. Bake 15 to 20 minutes or until a toothpick inserted near the center comes out clean. Serves 6, one muffin per serving. Cool. Can be served warm or chilled.

Cook's Tip

When cooked chicken is called for in a recipe, use leftover grilled or baked chicken breast meat or choose lean, low-sodium cooked chicken breast from your grocery-store delicatessen.

In A Lighter Vein

Did you ever wonder:

- *Why do you need a driver's license to buy liquor when you aren't supposed to drink and drive?
- *Why isn't phonetic spelled the way it sounds?
- *Why are there interstate highways in Hawaii?
- *Why are their floatation devices under plane seats instead of parachutes?
- *Why are cigarettes sold in gas stations when smoking is prohibited there?
- *Do you need a silencer on your gun if you are going to shoot a mime?
- *Have you ever imagined a world with no hypothetical situations?
- *How does the guy who drives the snowplow get to work in the morning?
- *If 7-11 is open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, why are there locks on the doors?
- *If a cow laughed, would milk come out of her nose?
- *If nothing ever sticks to TEFLON, how do they make TEFLON stick to the pan?
- *If you tied peanutbutter toast to the back of a cat and dropped it from a height, what would happen?
- *If you're in a vehicle going the speed of light, what happens when you turn on the headlights?
- *Why do they put Braille dots on the keypad of the drive-up ATM?
- *Why do we drive on parkways and park on driveways?
- *Why is it that when you transport something by car, it's called a shipment, but when you transport something by ship, it's called cargo?
- *You know that little indestructible black box that is used on planes? Why can't they make the whole plane out of the same substance?
- *Why is it that when you're driving and looking for an address, you automatically turn down the volume on the radio?
